Join Don't Duck History at the Newsome House Museum and Cultural Center

Have a light breakfast in the intimate setting of an 1899 Victorian home, while enjoying a portrayal of Martha Ann Fields. A determined woman, Martha escaped from her enslaver to Fort Monroe in Hampton Virginia with eight of her children. Within this historical re-enactment, you will discover how her legacy has a direct tie to The Newsome House, located in Newport News Virginia.

Valerie Davis portrays Martha Ann Fields

From her bio, Valerie is a "gifted storyteller, playwright and producer, and uses her talents to teach values and promote awareness of lesser known historical events and people. Of late, "From Tragedy to Triumph; The Martha Ann Fields Story" has been presented at over dozens of Schools and Churches in the Richmond VA area."

Don't Duck History will donate a portion of the ticket sale proceeds to The Newsome House Museum and Cultural Center, Inc. Foundation. Tickets are not tax-deductible, however, should you choose to make a donation to Don't Duck History in addition to your ticket purchase, your donation is considered tax-deductible to the extent of law, and you will be issued a receipt for your donation amount.

Don't Duck History is a fiscally sponsored project of United Charitable Programs, a registered 501(c)(3) public charity. EIN #20-4286082

BONUS: This event also serves as the opening day of a limited edition poster exhibit, containing posters from the new Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture, located in Washington DC. The posters, which show examples of items presented in the DC museum, will remain on display at Newsome House Museum through mid-December, 2017. After our presentation, you will have the opportunity to view the posters, along with the rest of the historical displays at the Newsome House.

A Place for All People: Introducing the National Museum of African American History and Culture is organized by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service in collaboration with the Museum.
